

THIS CHAPTER

Inspiration

The work being looked at while this chapter is made.
Paintings photographed against studio walls, under-drawings and process shots, captions that say what is failing, and a few older things that keep coming back.

A looking file rather than an argument, kept in the order it was gathered.

Process! Super fun and challenging painting, trying to "flesh out" Bernini's Hades! The mixed temp lights were especially tough!

helenedelmaire detail from painting in progress which is tighter than what I had in mind, some destruction incoming - probably. With each painting I manage to get a bit closer to the looseness and ambiguity I'm looking for, but too often I fall for the trap of complacency - portraits are so easily relatable and easy access, it's tempting to give into them. But other, less directly identifiable visuals give birth to more intriguing and interesting questions. Hopefully I manage to find them in this painting, we'll see.

charcoal.masters Charcoal shading by artist Xu Wangjun — a refined portrait study showing expressive linework, sensitive facial structure, and delicate tonal control. The artist builds the face gradually through soft shadows, confident contours, and subtle texture, capturing emotion and form with a beautifully natural sketching process.

Oil on paper on panel, 16x16"

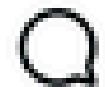

The Wheel of Fortune
Cycles, karma, fate. Always moving, always changing.

This piece started as an observation of tension. I twisted the paper as tightly as I could, then spent about a week watching it slowly uncoil and settle into itself. The shape reminded me of a snake eating its own tail, as well as the cycles of tension and release ever present in the nervous system.

Fool's Journey @elijah_wheat_showroom runs through September 6! Friday-Monday 12-6 and by appointment ❤️ vangoghmuseum  Need a hand? Well, there are plenty in these drawings made by Van Gogh. Not because it was easy, but because it wasn't.

Van Gogh practised relentlessly, repeating hands, faces and figures again and again. He believed drawing was 'the root of everything', using it to train his eye and sharpen his skills. So every line here shows us practice, persistence and progress. 💪

the Whitney's note:

"For many vanguard artists in the early twentieth century, music offered a model for expressing nonverbal emotional states and sensations. Georgia O'Keeffe was fascinated with what she called "the idea that music could be translated into something for the eye," but her references to music in the titles of her paintings derived equally from her belief that visual art, like music, could convey powerful emotions independent of representational subject matter. In Music—Pink and Blue II, the swelling, undulating forms imply a connection between the visual and the aural while also
